Allegro con fuoco. ♩=104.

(Die Menge liegt noch atemlos auf den Knieen, als während der letzten Takte des Kirchengesanges, wo die Orgel wieder eintritt, die Pforten des Lateran sich weit öffnen. Man erblickt die Kirche mit Priestern und Geistlichen aller Orden erfüllt; auf die große Treppe heraus schreitet Rienzi, ihm zur Seite Raimondo; Baroncelli und Cecco del Vecchio folgen. Rienzi ist in einer vollständigen Rüstung, nur sein Haupt ist entblößt. Bei seinem Erscheinen erhebt sich das Volk augenblicklich von den Knieen und jubelt ihm enthusiastisch entgegen.)
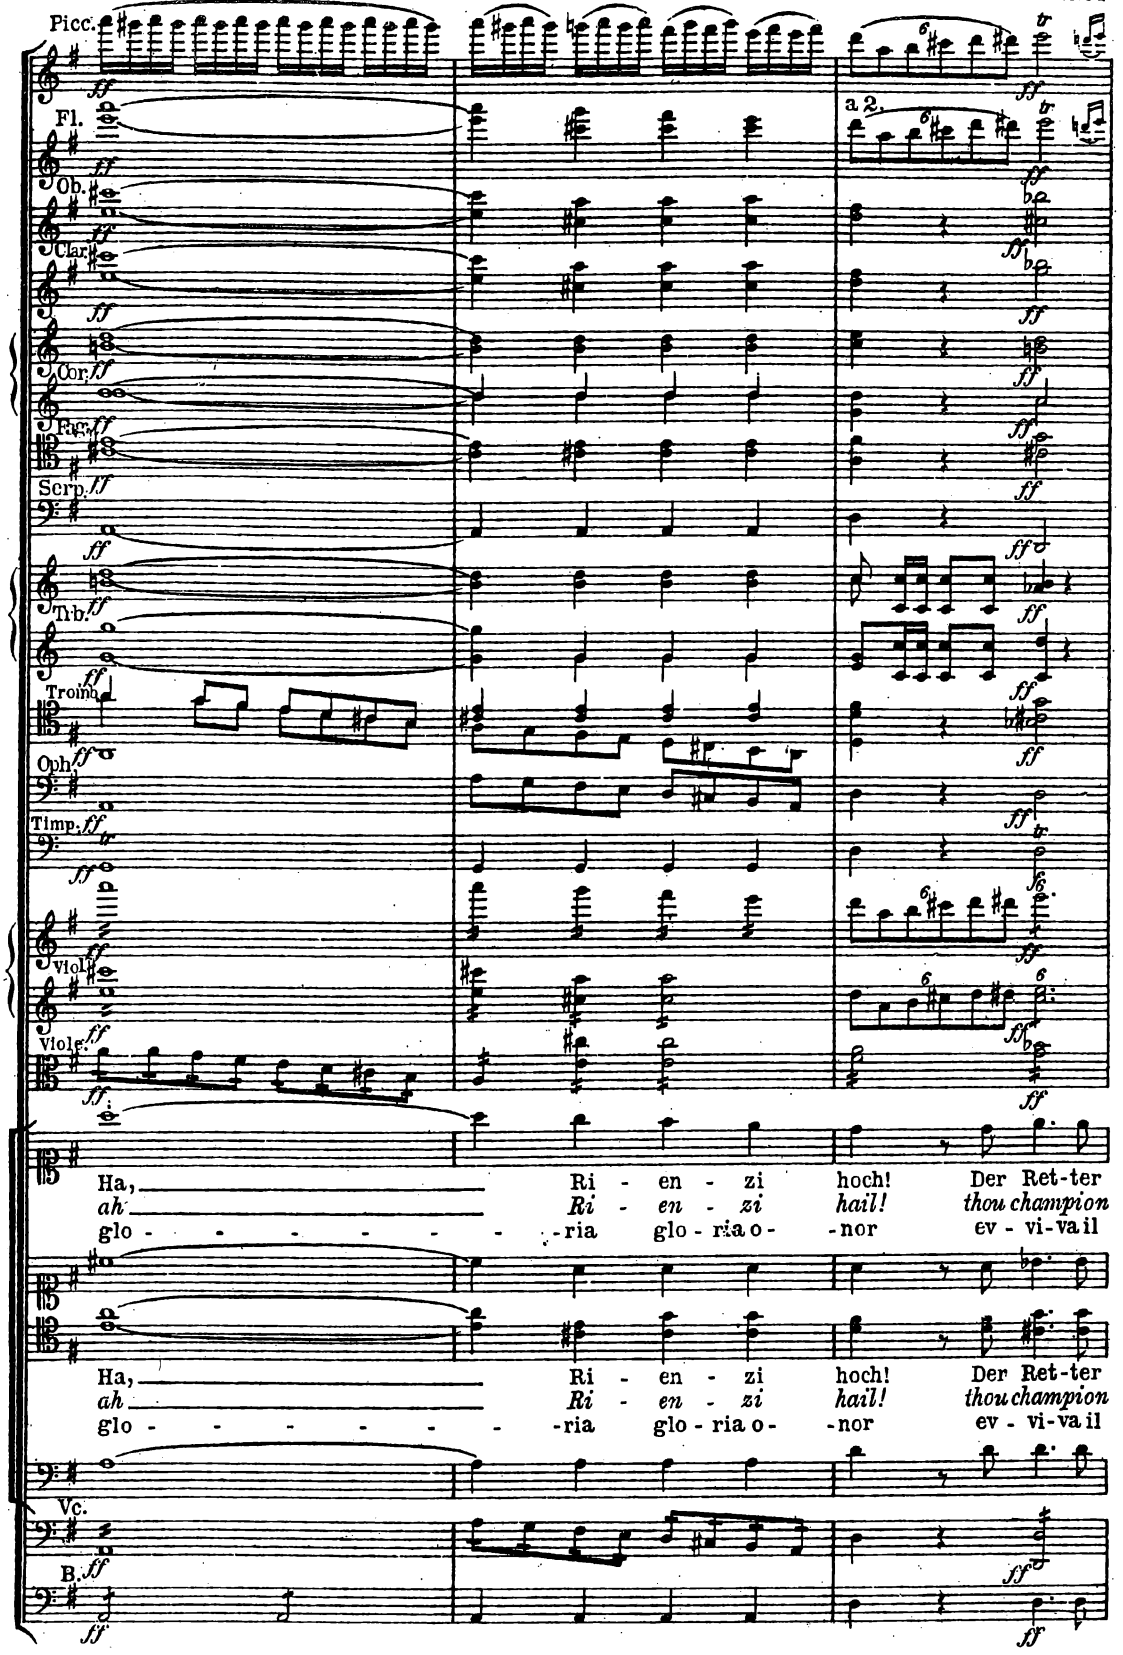

(The portals of the church are thrown open and discover in the interior a crowd of Priests and Monks of all orders. Rienzi appears accompanied by Raimondo, he is completely clad in armour, his head uncovered. At his appearance the people rise and receive him with great enthusiasm.)
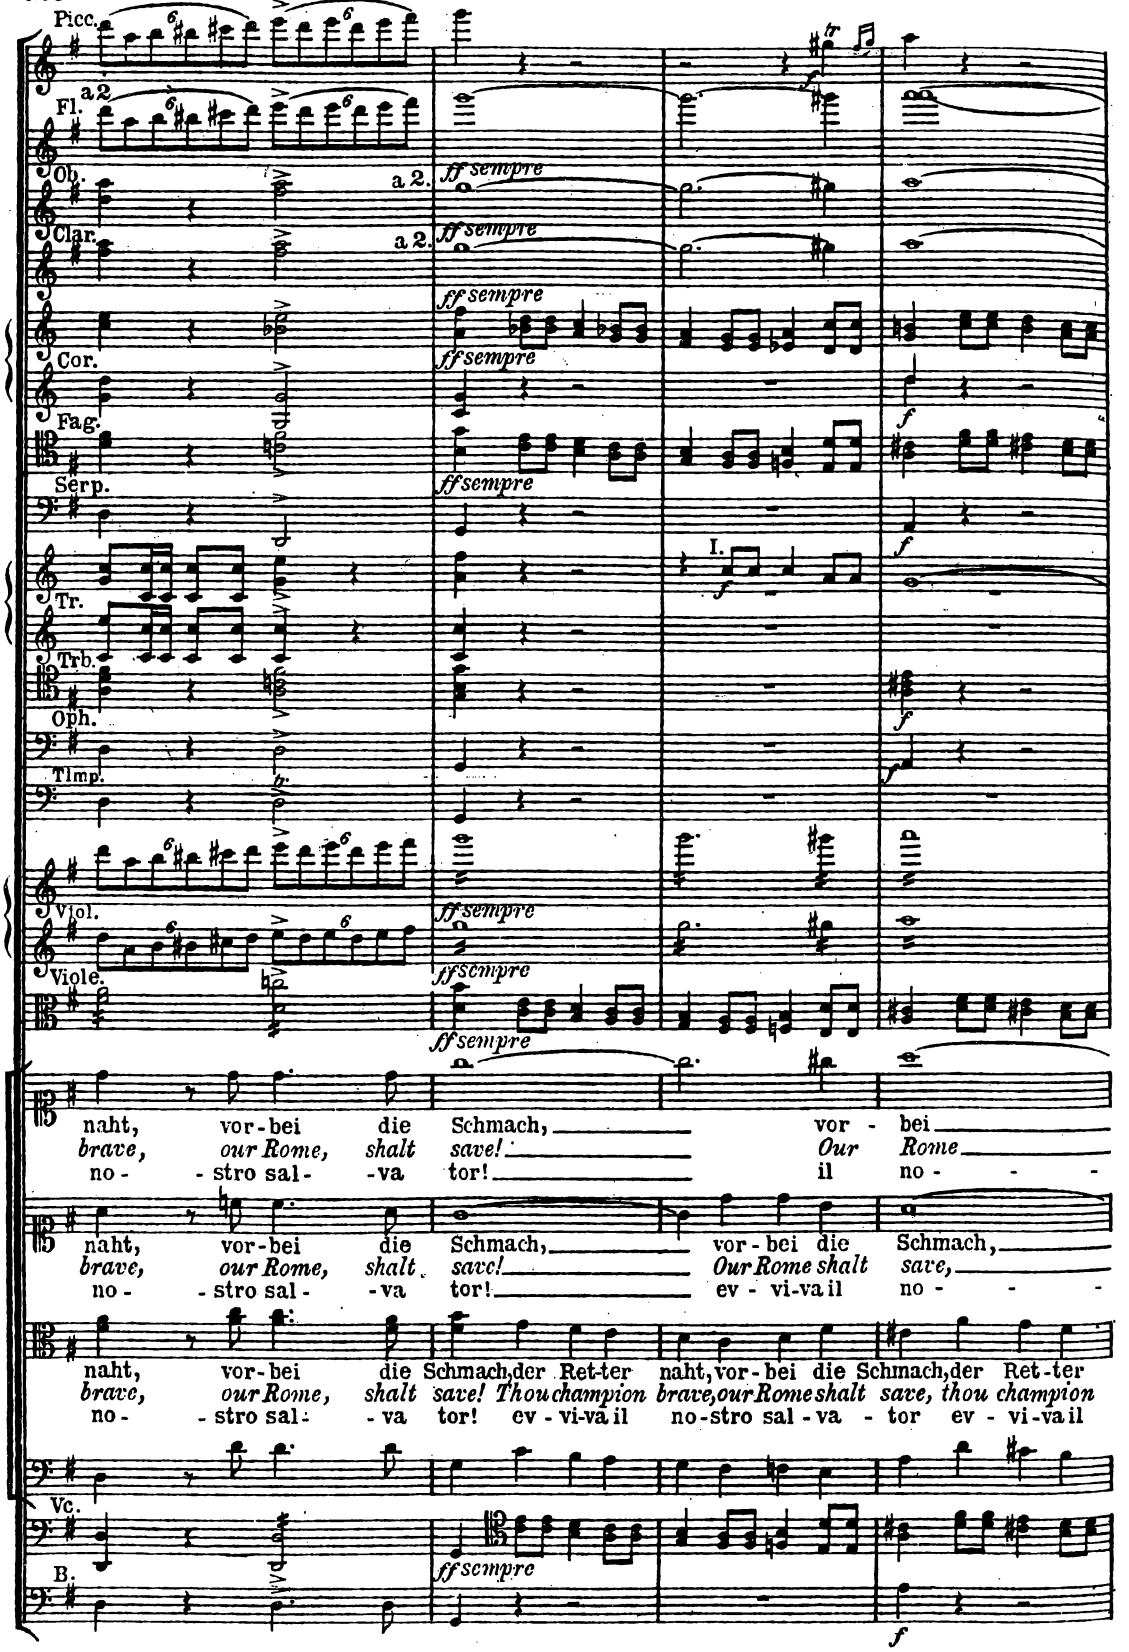

(Le porte del Laterano si schiudono violentemente. La chiesa è piena di Preti e di Monache d'ogni ordine. Rienzi appare vestito in armatura completa e col capo scoperto. Al suo lato stanno Raimondo e i principali del popolo in atto festoso. All'apparire di Rienzi il popolo in salutazione ed immenso entusiasmo.)

(Der Vorhang geht auf. – Die Scene stellt den großen Platz des alten Forums mit Ruinen von Säulen und Statuen dar. – Im Beginn der Scene hört man von ferne und in unregelmäßigen Pausen die große Capitolsglocke läuten. Wild aufgeregte Volkshaufen erfüllen die Scene.)
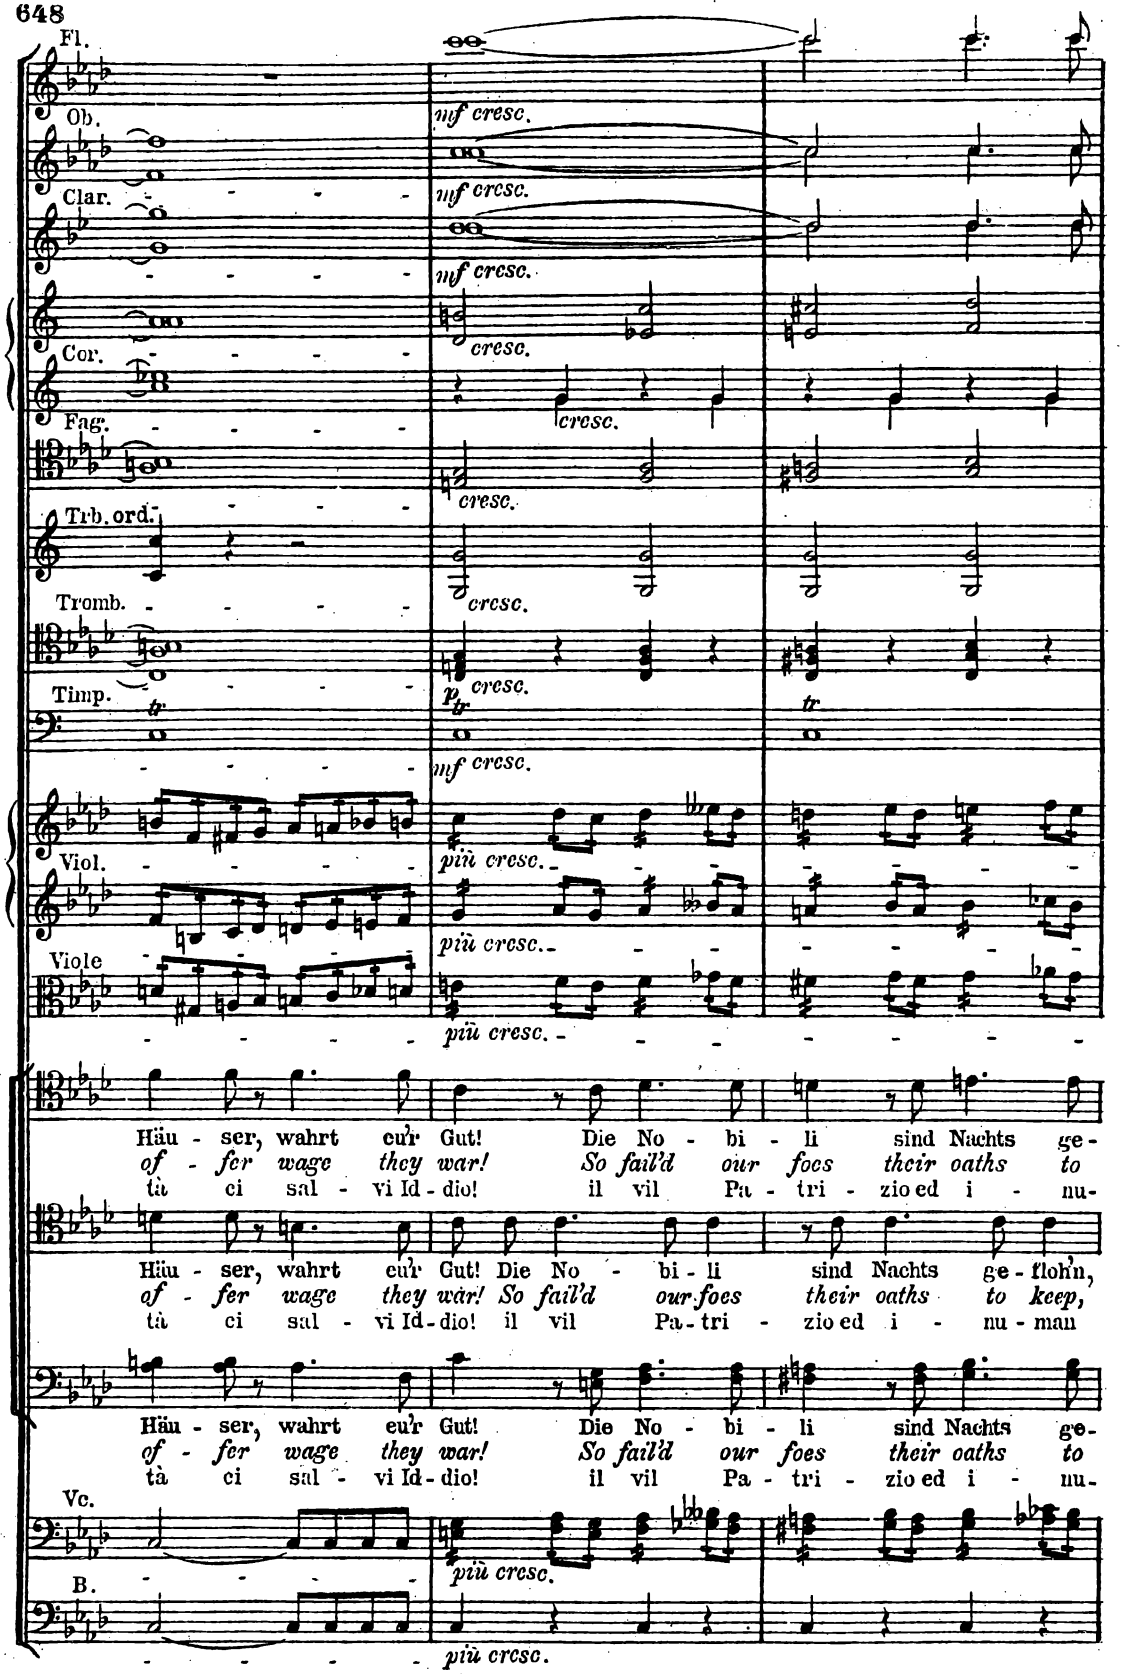

(A Square in Rome, around are lying ruined columns and broken capitals. Before the rising of the curtain Bells are heard ringing. At the rising the scene is crowded with people.)
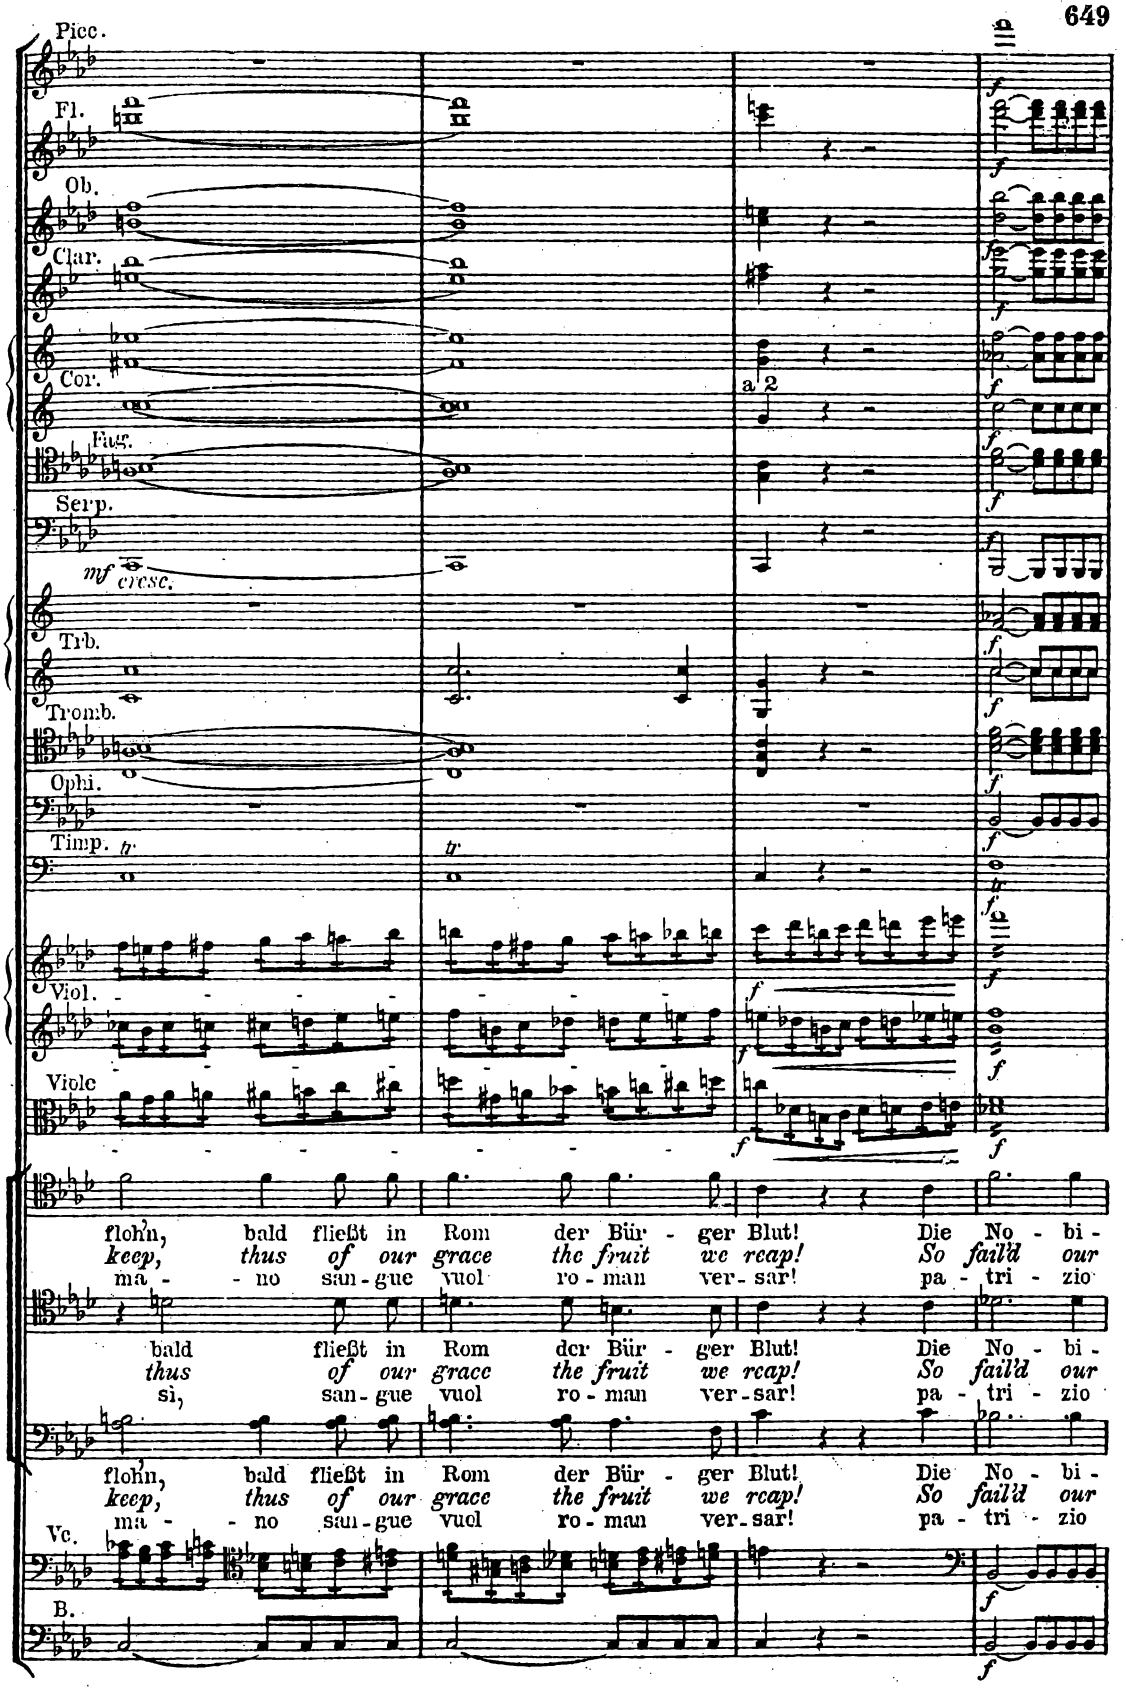

(Gran piazza in Roma. Colonne spezzate e capitelli precipitati. Prima che sialzi la tela si ode suonare a storma.)

NB. Die Musik auf dem Theater muß hier in ziemlicher Entfernung von der Scene aufgestellt sein; dennoch müssen die einzelnen Eintritte sehr stark geblasen werden, damit sie die Wirkung machen, als ob durch einzelne Windstöße der Schlachtlärm hergetragen würde; man muß deshalb auch die jedesmaligen Eintritte mit Sturwind begleiten.

(Friedensboten mit Lorbeerzweigen treten auf und geleiten einen antiken Triumphwagen Rienzi entgegen. Rienzi steigt vom Pferde und betritt den Triumphwagen, nachdem ihm von den Friedensboten der Helm abgenommen und dafür ein Lorbeerkranz auf das Haupt gesetzt worden ist. Irene, welche bei Adriano's Abgang erblassend in die Arme der Frauen gesunken war, wird von diesen zu Rienzi geleitet, welcher sie zu sich auf den Wagen heraufzieht, wo sie sich matt an ihres Bruders Schultern anlehnend an seiner Seite stehen bleibt Trophäen, bestehend aus Rüstungen und Feldzeigen der Nobili werden im Triumph vor Rienzi vorüber getragen, die Bewaffneten ordnen sich zum Zuge, dem sich endlich auch Rienzi im Triumphwagen anschließt.)
(Durante questo Coro alcuni Messi di pace entrano scortando un carro trionfale. Rienzi scende da cavallo e sale sur carro. I Messi gli tolgono dal capo l'elmo e lo incoronano d'alloro. Irene che era caduta nelle braccia delle donne alla partenza di Adriano, è accompagnata verso Rienzi; il quale la prende sul carro. Irene vi rimane immobile appoggiata alle spalle del fratello in affranto atteggiamento. Sfilano davanti a Rienzi trofei guerreschi e d armati in corteo trionfale.)

(Raimondo und die Priester haben sich sogleich in die Kirche zurückgezogen. Die Kirchenpforten sind schnell geschlossen worden; an ihnen angeheftet erblickt man die Bannbulle. Rienzi ist betäubt bis in die Mitte der Scene zurückgewichen, wo er in dumpfes Brüten versunken stehen bleibt. Irene ist an seiner Seite hingesunken. Die ganze Bühne ist schnell leer geworden, nur Adriano, der seinen Platz nicht verlaßen, steht an der Kirchtür.)
(Raimondo and the Priests shut violently the portals in Rienzi's face, and affix the Bull of excommunication. Rienzi retires backward and remains absorbed and troubled. Irene is prostrate at his side: All fly from them. Long pause, after which is heard within the church the last strains of the Chant.)
(Raimondo e i Preti chiudono con violenza la porta della chiesa e vi appendono la bolla della scomunica. Rienzi si ritira in mezza la scena e rimane assorto e conturbato: Irene gli si prostra accanto. Tutto il palco scenico in un attimo resta vuoto. Il canto di maledizione cessa.)

Szenische Bemerkung. Von Adrianos Auftritt an wird es immer finsterer, so daß die Szene in völliger Nacht endet; bald wachsendes, bald abnehmendes, im Ganzen aber immer näher kommendes Volksgetümmel wird von außen her vernommen; der grelle Schein von Feuerbränden erhellt blitzartig das Dunkel der Szene durch die Fenster, deren Scheiben durch Steinwürfe zerschlagen werden. Diese Steigerung des Aufruhrs muß jedoch erst gegen das Ende der Szene eintreten.

(Als Adriano dem Capitol zueilt stürzt der Turm wo Rienzi und Irene sich befinden, mit einem furchtbaren Krach zusammen, so daß er zugleich Adriano mit Rienzi und Irene begräbt.)
(The Capitol falls with a great crash, burying Adriano, Irene and Rienzi in the ruins. The Nobles attack the people and fight.)
(Il Campidoglio precipita e dirocca con orribile fracasso e seppellisce Adriano, Irene e Rienzi sotto le rovine: I Nobili si slanciano sul popolo.)
